Introduction

This Agriculture Note provides details of general and technical references in Australian goat production. The Department provides some technical Agriculture Notes on goat production. There are also other general publications on goat production, some of which are listed below. For many inquiries, including both students and farmers, a list of more technical sources of information is often requested.

This list does not claim to be comprehensive but refers to material relevant to southern Australian conditions, that should be obtainable from libraries.

There are also information and research reports available from Australian Web sites.
